

Schriever's Views

Retired Air Force missile expert Gen. Bernard A. Schriever said he believes the United States should concentrate on developing better missiles rather than on anti-missile defense.

Although the Soviet Union reportedly has begun deploying an anti-missile defense, Schriever said there is "a grave question" whether such a system can stop "sophisticated" intercontinental missiles.